Most people, perhaps, conceive of Mormonism as being practically synonymous with polygamy, and do not see why Utah should not be admitted as a state, provided there be a constitutional inhibition upon polygamy and spiritual marriages and sealing as the Mormons call it. Testimony recently taken in one of the Courts in Salt Lake City will show that there is a far more serious objection to Mormonism to the admission of Utah into the Union, and that no genuine Mormon can be a good citizen of the United States.

This testimony, given by men once high in the Mormon Church, is to the effect that every Mormon owes his highest allegiance to the Mormon Church or the kingdom of God. The oaths taken in the Endowment House said nothing about obedience to the laws of the United States. On the contrary, it was taught that the kingdom of God would be established and all other governments overthrown, and that the United States Government would be the first to go. It is not necessary to explain that the leaders of Mormonism were not speaking of the "kingdom of God" in a spiritual, but in a temporal sense, and that what they meant was that the power of the Mormon Church should be superior to that of the United States.

It is plain to see that no people holding such peculiar views can be admitted into the Union as citizens of a sovereign State. The Constitution and the acts of Congress are the supreme law of the land, not the edicts of a hierarchy; and so long as Mormonism prevails in Utah, so long it must remain a Territory, in order that it may be controlled directly by the power of the United States.

THERE is no prominent man in the country who is opening his mouth so often and to so poor advantage as Grover Cleveland. He is simply talking himself to death, while laboring under the impression that the country hangs on to his words as the bees sip honey from the fragrant flower.

LET every one interested in the State's future growth talk up the Board of Trade meeting, shortly to be held here, and let there be a good attendance of representative men from all quarters.

A BALTIMORE man has been convicted of stealing a lot of gold-filled teeth from the museum of the State University. He must have thought he had struck a disguised quartz mine.

SILVER is gradually climbing up and promises to touch $1 per ounce before Congress meets, or shortly after. Here is a chance for the Eureka Sentinel to kick its own bottom.

DELAWARE's citizen soldiery consists of four commissioned officers and 345 men. This does not speak very well for one of the oldest States in the Union.

The Wendell for the Grand Jury. Yesterday says: The preliminary examination of Ma Jew for the murder of Ah Wong on the night of the 12th instant took place before Justice Archer yesterday. The friends of Ah Wong had an interpreter brought here, as he and Ma Jew were members of different Chinese companies. The defendant was held to await the action of the Grand Jury, with bail fixed at $5,000.

Several years ago the Chinese had a killing match in which two of them were slain. One of the slayers was admitted to bail in the sum of $1,000 and another in the sum of $475, the Justice having ascertained the amount each could put up in cash. Both left the country and went to China, and the county was gainer the amount of $1,475.

THE DIAMOND'S HOME.

Facts Concerning the Great Mines of South Africa.

A Gigantic Enterprise in Which 1,300 Overseers Are Employed, and Over $5,000,000 of European Capital Are Expended Every Year.

The De Beers mine disaster in the South African diamond fields, by which twenty-four whites and two hundred natives perished, as reported from Cape Town, via London, has awakened fresh interest among those who deal in the most valuable of precious stones. By far the greatest portion of the diamonds now obtained come from the mines of South Africa, which were discovered near Hopetown in 1867 by some Dutch children. The mines are situated in Griqualand West, now a part of Cape Colony, in latitude 28 degrees 40 minutes, longitude 25 degrees 10 minutes east, about 640 miles northeast of Cape Town, and 500 miles from the sea coast. Although they are at an elevation of nearly 4,000 feet above the sea level, the heat is excessive during the summer months, when the work is principally carried on.

According to the first report of the terrible calamity it was that "the De Beers Coal Mine at Kimberley" had caught fire. The manifest error in regard to the character of the mine was not corrected in subsequent dispatches, but the cause of the fatal fire was explained in this way: "While the shafts were being changed the hauling wire broke and the skip rushed down the shaft with frightful rapidity. The oil lamps were broken, and the blazing fluid quickly ignited the wooden casing of the shaft. Flames in great volumes shot up the shaft, completely prevailing against the mine, was soon filled with smoke, and the lights carried by the miners were rendered useless. The panic-stricken natives and whites, in their efforts to escape, became massed together in the galleries and were suffocated to death."

The superintendent of the De Beers Mine is Gardener F. Williams, of Oakland, Cal. He went to South Africa on his second trip in the latter part of 1886. He is a regular correspondent of George F. Kunz, Tiffany & Co.'s gem expert and mineralogist. A New York Times reporter talked with Mr. Kunz, and obtained from him some interesting facts about the De Beers Mine.

The mine covers 13 1/2 acres or 610 claims, each 31 feet square, with a roadway of 15 feet between each claim. The mines were originally worked in individual claims, 3,143 in number, each 31 feet square, with a roadway 7 1/2 feet wide between each pair of claims. These small claims are now consolidated into about ninety large companies and private firms, having a gross capital of nearly $50,000,000. There are four large mines, all within a radius of a mile and a half. The celebrated Kimberley covers seven and a half acres. Thirty-three million karats (over six and a half tons) of diamonds have already been taken out, valued in the rough at $45,000,000 and after cutting at $20,000,000. The absorption of the smaller by the larger companies is constantly going on, and it is proposed to consolidate all the companies into one. Ten thousand natives, each receiving $1 a week, are employed in the mines under the supervision of 1,300 European overseers. The enormous sum of over $1,000,000 is annually expended for labor.

This mammoth investment of European capital would have been more profitable to the shareholders were it not for the dishonesty of the native diggers, who, instigated by the vicious whites that congregate on the field, at one time stole and disposed of from one-fifth to one-fourth of the entire yield. More improved methods of surveillance, recently introduced, have diminished this loss. None but authorized agents are permitted to purchase or possess rough diamonds, and a large detective force is on the alert to prevent any infringement of the rules. A record is now kept of every diamond found. The thieves have been caught making chickens swallow diamonds in the mine, and a post-mortem held on one of the natives who died suddenly revealed the fact that his death was caused by a sixty-karat diamond which he had swallowed.

According to the latest official reports there were employed in the De Beers mine 394 whites and 2,738 natives. Of the latter 300 were hired from the Government at a cost of $28 per annum. Formerly the natives were allowed to leave the mines, but owing to the fraudulent traffic carried on, 2,300 of them were last year compounded. They practically lived in the mines, and were better off than those who had their freedom. The old system of open workings has been to a great extent abandoned for the shaft and underground plan. Under the original method the excavations were carried on to a depth of 500 feet. There were many accidents, owing to the falling shale or reef. A rock shaft is completed to a depth of 841 feet and taps low levels. During the last year over 31,221 feet of main tunnel were driven. There is one shaft of 791 feet, another of 477 feet, and a third of 125 feet. As many as eighteen tribes of natives have been represented in the mines. Some of the natives have been known to tramp 1,000 miles to get work.

In 1887-88 890,000 loads of "blue stuff" were hauled from the mines, and $50,000 loads yielded 979,733 1/2 carats, for which the company received $284,055 14 64. The actual expenditure was $415,188, leaving a profit of $508,897. The De Beers mine is capitalized at $24,600,000 in $10 shares. These were quoted as high as $23 last month, and are now at $22. The mine is now advanced to $23. It is the opinion of Mr. Kunz that the recent accident will cause another decline in shares. From September 1, 1888, to December 31, 1887, the De Beers mine yielded 944,015 karats, valued at $3,420,388, an average of $1 1/2 per carat. This includes every thing taken from the mine. In the beginning of the enterprise the mine produced .4 karat per load, but last year the yield was .8 karat per load, a significant increase.

Water flows from the mine at the rate of 1,500 gallons per hour, and at the rate of 1,300 gallons from the rock shaft. There are nine big washing machines in use, which are more reliable than the hand or eye.

ALMOST A TRAGEDY.

A Jealous Husband Makes Things Lively.

Last evening about 6 o'clock the people on Virginia street were somewhat startled by the appearance of a woman scooting along the street, followed by a breathless, white-faced man, who was shouting: "Run, for God's sake! He's after us." They turned down Second street and disappeared. A moment afterwards a big man with his hand upon his pistol pocket came upon a dead jump. Constable Upson, who was attracted to the scene by the noise, stopped the third floor-raiser, who threatened dire vengeance if he was molested. The officer, however, mentioned something about the code, which had the effect of quieting him down. It appears that the big man and his wife have had some trouble, and that she had left him and taken up with another fellow. This made the husband mad and he thirsted for gore. The woman had been away from home for three or four days, and last evening, feeling the necessity of a change of clothing, went to the house to obtain the goods, accompanied by her new fellow. This action seems to have agitated the husband to a considerable extent, for he danced around like a bear on hot coals. After considering the matter for a few minutes, until they were, as he thought, out of sight, he gave a war-whop and started in pursuit, with the above result.

VIRGINIA CITY, Nov. 26, 1889.
 EDITOR GAZETTE: We arrived in Virginia at 1:10 P. M., were met by a large concourse of men, women and children, and marched to the Court-house, where the Committee on Entertainment quartered the ladies on the inhabitants of Virginia. After a hearty lunch at Fitzmeyer's we went to the Fourth Ward Schoolhouse, when Superintendent Dovey called the institute to order.
 A song was sung by Miss Clara Morgan, after which a paper on Industrial Drawing by Prof. A. E. Harris, Principal of the Silver City schools, was read. Miss Nettie Sharp of the Gold Hill schools then read a paper on the same subject—Industrial Drawing. These papers were followed by remarks by Professors Bray, Howe and Baker. A song was then sung by Miss M. Pyne of Virginia, when the institute adjourned to meet at the National Guard Hall at 7:30 P. M. There were about sixty teachers enrolled to-day.

ANOTHER GONE.

Death of Mrs. C. L. Fisher at Her Home.

Yesterday afternoon news was received in Reno of the death of Mrs. C. L. Fisher in Burlington, Vt., causing deep and unaffected sorrow among her many friends in this community. A few weeks ago Rev. and Mrs. Fisher left here on a visit to the latter's old home, which she had not seen for thirty-five years. When she left she was apparently in the best of health, and her death was a surprise to all. The following telegram of condolence was sent last evening to Mr. Fisher:

Rev. C. L. Fisher: "Baptist Church and friends extend their sincere sympathy, and pray God may comfort you in this great bereavement."

R. T. Phillips, Church Clerk.

Mrs. Fisher was greatly beloved by all who knew her, and her death is a sad blow to the community. The GAZETTE extends its most sincere sympathy to the family in this their deepest affliction.

An Open Letter.

The following communication, signed by F. J. Powers, F. H. Norcross, T. E. Robb, Chas. P. Brown, H. E. Cutting, W. E. Manning, O. A. Lawson, F. A. Bristol, W. E. Barney, A. M. Lewers and F. Kline, all students at the University, was received this morning:

NEVADA STATE UNIVERSITY, RENO, Nov. 23, 1889.
 In the interests of justice the undersigned, students at the State University, and under especial obligations to the institution for financial assistance by way of employment on the premises, desire to emphatically deny the published statement by a Carson paper that Professor Brown had disparaged manual labor. On the contrary, we have always found him a zealous advocate of honest toil and a sympathetic friend of earnest laborers.

Well Represented.

Through the efforts of the County Superintendent and the liberality of School Trustees, the teachers of Washoe county are attending en masse the State Teachers' Institute being held in Virginia City. Probably no county in the State, other than Storey, will be better represented than Washoe. This speaks well for the educational enterprise of not only the school officials, but of the teachers. These institutions are efficient aids, not only to the schoolmasters, but to legislative legislation, which has a tendency to promote the best interests of the State.

Read, Feast, Digest.

The day of feasting draweth nigh and scores of turkeys soon must die; Get one that's young and sweet and fat, And stuff it full of this and that. With fruits and herbs and pies and cakes, And add, preserve lives and pies and cakes. Ask friends and kindred all to come And meet with a kindness at your home. Let not the carols of life distress, But fill each glass with happiness. Revive the joys of youth and days, And for all blessings offer praise.

Knight of Honor.

The costume for the masquerade has now on exhibition at the Pavilion the finest array of costumes to be found on the coast. Call and select one. On the evening of the ball ladies in mask will be admitted free; spectators 50 cts.

A CALIFORNIA SENSATI.

[Potluna Courier].
 It is reported that the sales of the "California Sensati," Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla, have grown within a few months till they are now really sensational. The way the fame of this production has spread is simply marvelous.

Six months ago it was unknown. To-day it is all over the country. It is authoritatively stated that they have been actually giving it away in San Francisco to people afflicted with dyspepsia, sick headaches, indigestion and liver troubles, not to be paid for unless it cured. Such a practical test as is so startlingly convincing as to be almost sensational. It is stated that two of the active principles of the new remedy belong to the vegetable kingdom of California and are so well known to us all under common names that it would surprise us if told them. But we are not surprised at anything Californian, and this recent discovery of the new medicinal virtues of its vegetable kingdom is but another instance of the astonishing possibilities of a soil and climate like ours.

Group Can be Prevented.

We want every mother to know that croup can be prevented. There is no question about this; it has been done in thousands of cases, and you may depend upon it that when a child takes the croup, it is owing to the negligence of its parents. True croup never appears without due and timely warning; a few hours, or a day before the attack, the child becomes hoarse. This hoarseness is the first indication of croup, and is a sure sign that croup is to follow, unless promptly and properly treated. The free use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed with other timely nursing the child, will prevent the croup. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE.

Up from the south at the break of day,
Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay,
The shrieking air with a shudder bore,
Like a herald in haste, to the chieftain's door.
The terrible grumble, and rumble, and roar,
Telling the battle was once more,
And Sheridan twenty miles away.

And wilder still those billows of war
Thundered along the horizon's bar,
And louder yet into Winchester rolled
The roar of that red sea uncontrolled,
Making the blood of the listener cold
As he thought of the terrible road they trod,
With Sheridan twenty miles away.

But there's a road from Winchester town,
A good, broad highway leading down;
And there, thro' the flash of the morning light,
A steed as black as the e'ens of night
Was seen to pass with eagle flight;
He stretched away with untold speed;
His hoofs and fell-bell as his heart was gay,
With Sheridan fifteen miles away.

Under his spurring fell the road
Like an arrowy Alpine river flow,
And the landscape flowed away behind,
Like an ocean the horses' hoofs behind;
And the steed, like a bark led with furnace fire,
Swept on with his wild eyes full of fire,
But he is nearing his hear's desire,
He is sniffing the smoke of the roaring fray,
With Sheridan only five miles away.

The first that the General saw were the groups
Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops;
What was done—that to do—a gleam told him
Both.
And, striking his spurs, with a terrible oath
He dashed down the lines 'mid a storm of hurrahs.

And the wave of retreat checked its course
There because
The sight of the master compelled it to pause.
With foam and dust the black charger
Was gay;
By the flash of his eye and his nostrils' play
He seemed to the whole great army to say:
"I have brought you Sheridan all the way
From Winchester town to save the day!"

Hurrah! hurrah! for Sheridan!
Hurrah! hurrah! for horse and man!
And when their statues are placed on high,
Under the dome of the union sky—
The American soldier's temple of fame—
There, with the General's glorious name,
Be it said, in letters both bold and bright:
"Here is the steed that saved the day,
By carrying Sheridan into the fight
From Winchester, twenty miles away!"

—Thomas Buchanan Reid.

ON THE VERY BRINK.

Ned Armstrong's "Jolly" Ride on an Ice-Cake.

"Say, Hal, let's go and see them dynamiting the ice."

"Where is it, and what's dynamiting, anyway?"

"Why, over there behind the railway bridge they're blowing up the ice with dynamite. Kind of powder, you know, only ten times worse, father says. Must be fun to see it going off. Come along. A lot of the fellows have gone over already."

"All right, Ned. Just hold on until I put my books in the house, and then I'm with you."

And the school-bags having been disposed of, the two boys hurried away to the railway bridge.

The Rideau river had risen, overflowed its banks, and invaded the village of New Edinburgh. Running streams too deep to cross except in boats had taken the place of the streets; instead of yards the people looked out upon muddy ponds in whose swirling waters chips, logs, boxes and barrels floated about and only the buildings stood above the water; all else in that neighborhood was submerged, and Hal Roberts, who in company with the "Bodleys" had just been doing Venice, thought that all New Edinburgh now needed was half a dozen gondolas and a Doge's palace to be a little Venice on her own account.

To Hal and Ned the flood seemed fine fun, especially since the river formed being on the high ground they were not nearly so comfortable by it, and they watched its progress with great interest. For a whole week the water had been steadily rising as the hot spring sunshine blazed away at the immense snow drifts which lay along the river banks. Had it not been for the ice the water would have been deep enough, and gone roaring and splashing over the Rideau Falls into the broad Ottawa.

But the ice was so thick and solid that it melted slowly and the river-end being full of it the water was quite dammed up, and could not get away. At last some bright person had thought of blowing up this ice barrier with dynamite, and the eager to try anything the poor flooded folk had jumped at the idea, and were putting it into execution.

A number of men were at work when breathless with running Hal and Ned appeared upon the scene; and this was the way they went about it. With their sharp crow-bars they drilled a deep hole into the ice-floe some distance from the edge, the dynamite cartridge was slipped cautiously in with the detonator and fuse attached, and then every body having made off to a safe distance, the charge was exploded, a dull heavy concussion filled the air, the ice sprang high out of the water and fell back in fragments, and great cracks showed themselves in the once solid ice-field. After that the men had only to push and pry a little in order to send huge pieces off into the current that was rushing fiercely down its confined passage. In fresh time the fun rapidly along until they leaped over the Falls into the Ottawa below.

Intent and excited the two boys watched the work for some time, crowding in close when the holes were being driven, taking a last peep at the cartridge, that looked so innocent but could do so much damage, as the men slipped into the water, and then scattering off to a safe distance on the warning being given, and shouting with delight when the explosion took place, and the ice splintered up into fragments with a rattling crash. Then as the great jagged cakes were detached from the main body, and sent sailing away, the boys sat and followed them down a piece, each selecting one and playing at racing with it until it was time to get back for the next explosion.

Hal was so delighted with the proceedings that he could have watched them the whole afternoon; but Ned soon began to tire, and to cast about for some variation in their amusement. Now there was not much rash, headstrong boy in the whole village than Ned Armstrong. No other ringleader in feats of daring or mischief was needed when he made one of the crowd, and this afternoon as he watched the big ice-cakes floating on! he was not notably down the current, it flashed into his mind—how jolly it would be to have a ride on one of them! What a splendid raft it would make! In view of the danger any ordinary boy would not have entertained the idea for a moment. It was nothing short of madness. But Ned was not an ordinary boy; he could hardly have offended him more than by hinting that he was. To be out of the ordinary was his pride and delight.

"Say, Hal," he burst out suddenly, "I've got it! The best fun you ever had in your life!"

"What is it?" answered Hal, eagerly.

"Why, to have a ride on one of those cakes. I'll be a first class circus."

"Chut! Ned. You wouldn't dare try that."

"Just wouldn't I! Come along. We'll stand on that point until a big one comes by, and then jump on. We can jump off again when we like, you know."

So saying Ned Armstrong ran out to a point where the current turned the corner, as it were, and the cakes in passing rubbed close against it so that there was no difficulty in getting on board one of them.

Partly carried away by his companion's example, and partly in hopes of dissuading him from his fool-hardy project, Hal, who closed on Ned's heels, and in another moment they were standing together on the point with the great ice cakes whirling past at their very feet.

"Now then, Hal," cried Ned. "We'll each jump on one, and have a race in earnest. We can jump off, you know, before we come to the point bridge."

"No, no, Ned! It's too dangerous," urged Hal, now realizing the folly of the thing.

"Let's go back."

"Tut, man, you're afraid; you've got no pluck," retorted Ned.

"I've plenty of pluck, Ned. You needn't say that. But I'm not going to make a fool of myself," retorted Hal, warmly.

"Who's a fool! Come along—if you're not a coward," cried Ned, growing angry too.

"I won't, Ned, and you shan't either if I can help it." And suiting his action to his word Hal caught hold of Ned's arm.

"Just you take your hands off me, sofy—I'm off! You can go home to your mother," sneered Ned, and breaking away from his companion he sprang out upon a large cake which just then rubbed against the point, and went careering down the current, exclaiming boastfully: "How is this for fun!"

Completely taken aback at Ned's sudden action Hal stood motionless for a moment, gazing upon his playmate speeding along to what he felt sure was certain death. Then, full of fear, he ran over the ice after him calling out:

"Ned! Ned! jump off! You'll go over the Falls!"

But Ned's only answer was to take off his hat and swing it round his head with a shout:

"Hurrah for the ice-ship! What a time we're having!"

Under the dark arch of the railway bridge, and out upon the other side the ice-cake with its foolish freight rushed rapidly, its pace increasing every minute. Soon it reached the broad expanse between the railway and the road bridges, and Hal, who was doing his best to keep up, noted with increased alarm that it kept well out in the middle of the current so that it was impossible for Ned to jump off, try as hard as he might. All at once, Ned apparently noticed this too, and began to show signs of alarm, running from side to side of the cake, and raising his arms and shouting in the distance between it and the bridge. Just beside the road bridge there was an eddy where the water curled about the shore about. If the ice-cake only got into that eddy its passenger would be all safe.

Ned's danger had now become known, and the shore was lined with people watching his perilous voyage, and shouting to him all sorts of advice. One man, instead of wasting time in giving advice, procured a long rope, and going out to the extreme edge of the stationary ice flung it towards Ned, who grasped frantically at it, but it fell so close to him that he could not catch it, and the cake went on its way more rapidly than ever.

The road-bridge drew near, but the ice-cake still kept well out in the center of the current, and there seemed small chance of its getting into the eddy. Frantic with fear, Ned Armstrong seized his hat and used it as a paddle made desperate efforts to guide his clumsy craft towards this only haven of safety. But he might as well have tried to send it back against the resistless current. The ponderous ice-block utterly refused to be guided. It went steadily on its way, dipping and raising as the hither and yon surface of the water broke up into turbulent whirls with the near approach of the falls, whose sullen roar already began to make itself distinctly heard.

In another minute the road-bridge would be reached, and realizing that it was the last chance, the man who had the rope raised it high, and threw it towards the cake, under which the cake must pass, in order to try another fling. Had he only been a few seconds sooner he might have succeeded. But he was just that much too late, and again the rope fell short, although Ned early tumbled off the ice in his eager endeavor to secure it. A shout of horror went from the people who lined the river banks and crowded the bridge, gazing helplessly at the unhappy lad sweeping so swiftly on.

Between the bridge and the falls there now only remained an open space, scarce more than a yard in length, and it was here which the waters, as if rebelling against the leap before them, broke forth into angry foam-crested waves in whose midst the low-lying ice-raft was tossed and tumbled about so that the boy upon it had hard work to keep erect. Hal paralyzed with dread, he stood there in the silence of the spot right under which the cake must pass in its headlong rush, he flings himself face downward on the beams, he leans far over the edge, his long, sinewy arms stretched to their utmost length. And straight toward him comes the ice-cake. He shouts, "Ned, looking up, sees him. He understands. He turns to face him, and, just as the shadow of the bridge falls upon the ice, he puts all his strength into one wild leap towards the outstretched arms—he does not miss them—he is caught fast in their grip—and for one awful moment he sways above the raging torrent; the spectators hold their breath in sickening apprehension; then with a gigantic effort "Big Alec" swings the boy clear up upon the bridge, and stands beside him trembling in every nerve and muscle, while a shout that rivals the roar of the falls goes up from the overjoyed on-lookers.

One of the first to be at Ned Armstrong's side was Hal Roberts, the tears of joy streaming down his cheeks as he threw his arms around his playmate who had thus been saved on the very brink—J. Macdonald, Caley, in Wide Awake.

John I. Blair, of Blairtown, N. J., is reported to be worth $50,000,000, yet such is his strong sense of mercy holding his wealth in trust for the benefit of his fellow men that he spends upon himself less almost than is paid to his humblest workman. When Mr. Blair stops at the hotel, if he intends to stay over night, he usually asks for a small inside room on the parlor floor. If it is in the winter, and too cold to sit without a fire, he sits in the public lobby. If he intends to leave before midnight he does not take a room at all, but occupies the public room down stairs, and if he wishes to change his shirt he slips into the little wash-room behind the office. "I never offer or refuse," he said jokingly one day a gentleman who offered him a cigar.
